The Legend of Glass Dedicated to Couture Jewellery

Gripoix makes exquisite costume jewellery, taking the art of ‘pâte de verre’ to perfection.

Gripoix, the specialist brand creating ‘pâte de verre’ jewels, has always provided the storied French Maisons and fashion brands with exquisite handmade creations for more than a century. Today, Gripoix still plays an essential role in the fashion world.

By maintaining exclusive design and production for maisons and fashion brands, Gripoix also designs and develops collections under the brand name Gripoix Paris.

Each season, the Gripoix Paris collection creates and develops remarkable costume jewellery and accessories with brass, dipped in 18 karat gold, drawing from the brand’s historic Parisien style and elegance.

The vibrant poured glass colours alone or embellished with stamps, crystals and pearls are truly signatures of the brand.

Gripoix proudly sustains the savoir faire heritage of this complex and distinct jewel making process from its Parisian atelier and workshop.

With an entirely French production process, Gripoix guarantee for its clients the highest quality craftsmanship.

Gripoix Paris is certified with the prestigious “Entreprise du Patrimoine Vivant” (Living Heritage Company) label – a mark of recognition from the French state, awarded to companies that uphold excellence in traditional craftsmanship.

History of the 'pâte de verre' technique

The 'pâte de verre' technique came from the traditional French 'savoir-faire' of the glass bead makers. It is thanks to the first fashion designers that this technique developed into such an art form.

At the beginning of the 20th century, the established Fashion Houses needed to embellish their runway collections with colours, crystals, and jewellery. From these exceptional jewels for the most revered Fashion Maisons, the poured glass bijoux became famous.

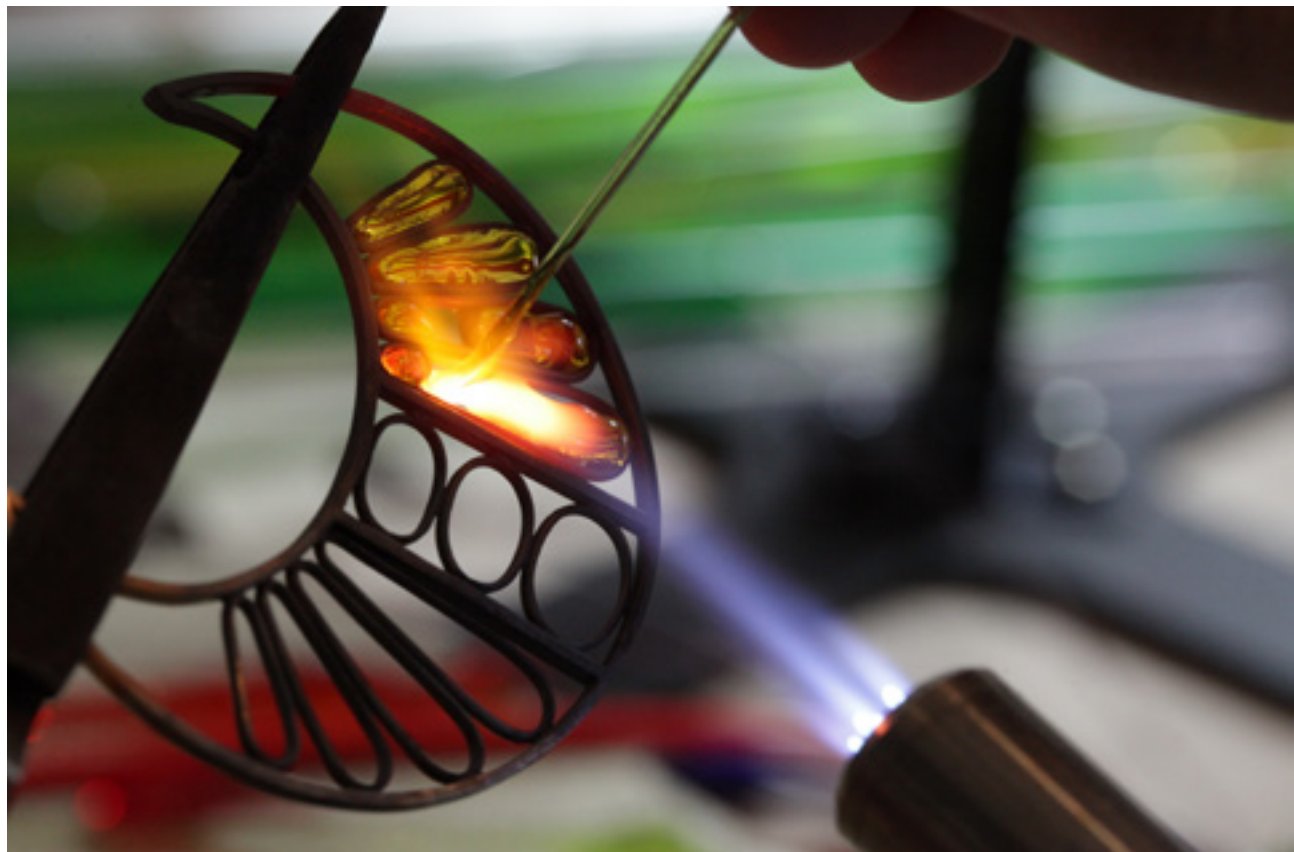

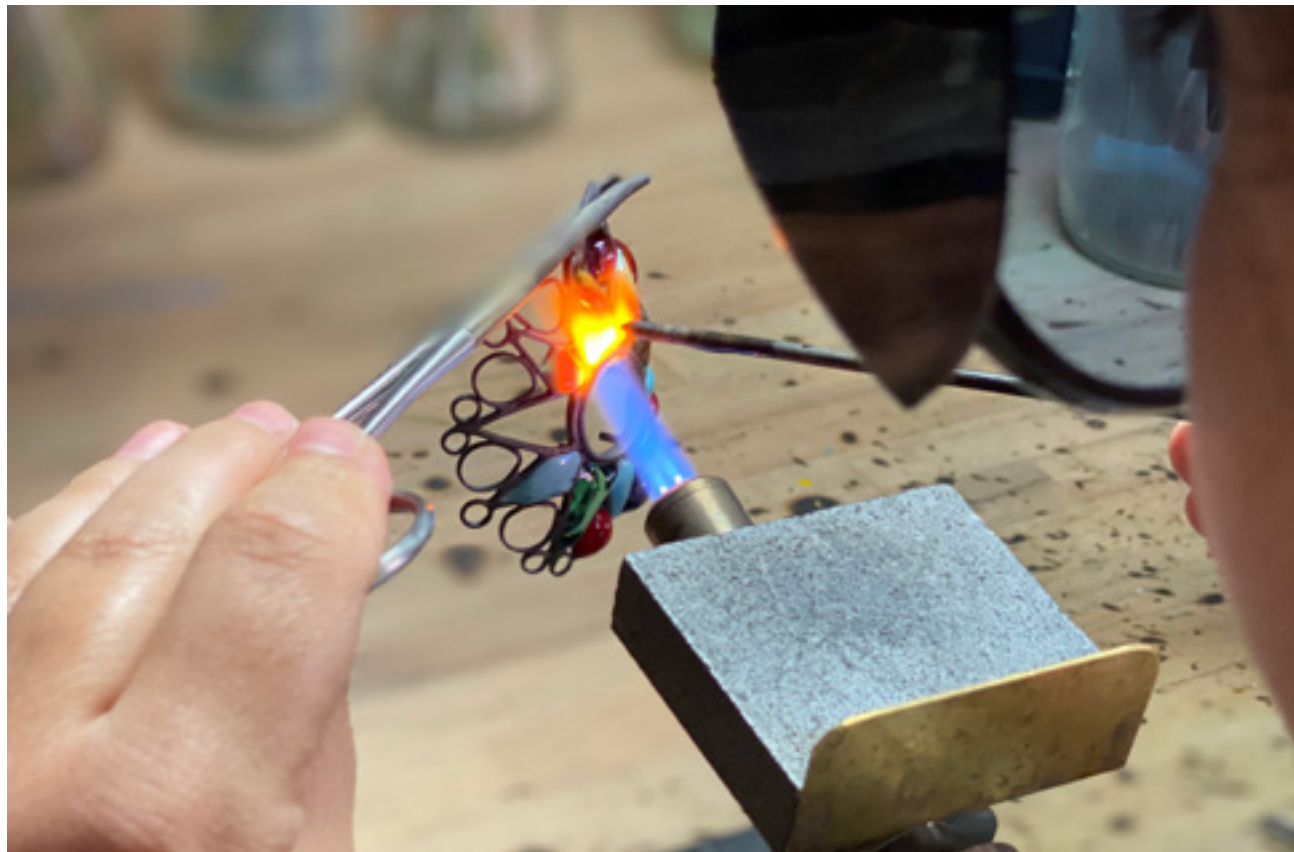

With this technique, they could imitate the precious stones of the medieval jewels, like emerald, sapphire, topaz, amethyst and ruby. Gripoix became synonymous with the gorgeous 'couture' statement pieces.

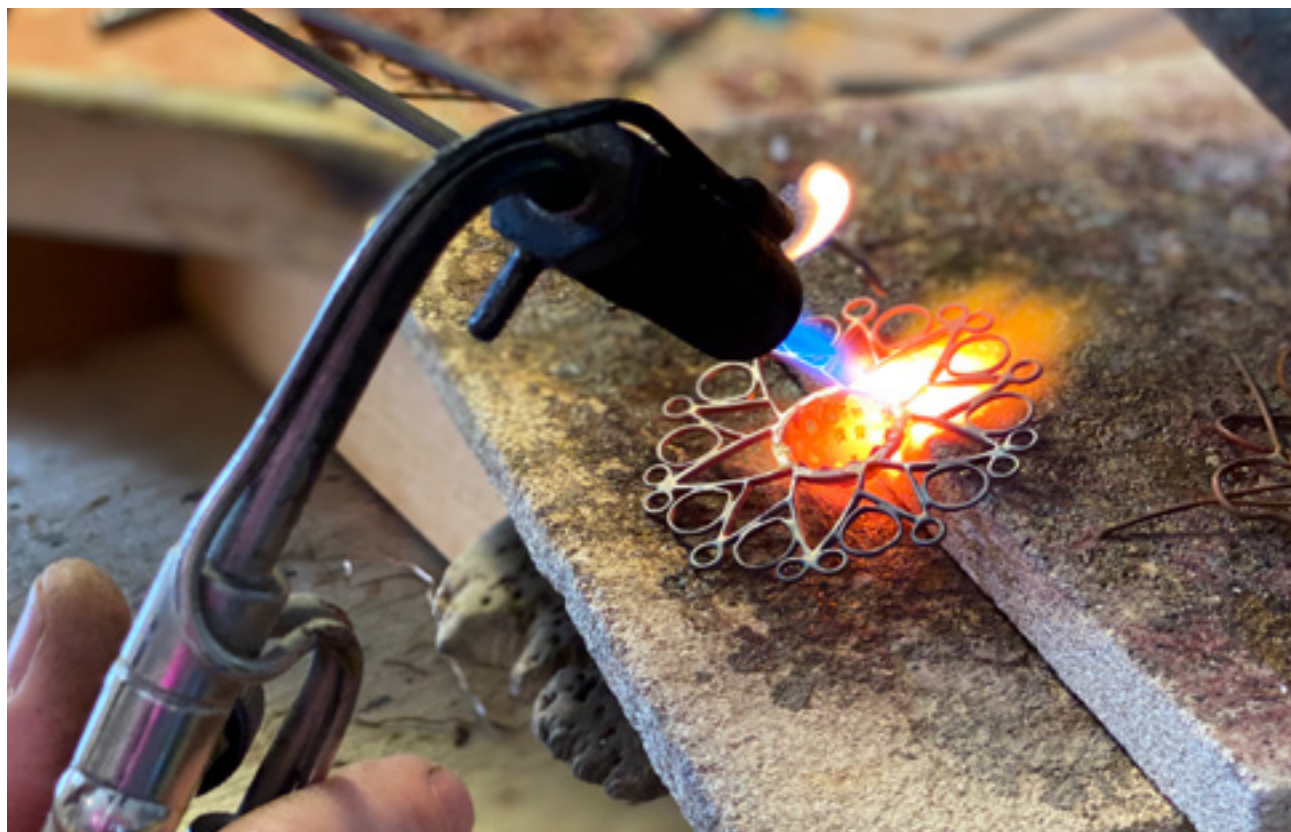

Today, Gripoix Paris is the symbol of the 'Maison de Bijoux de Couture.' At their workshop in the heart of Paris, a creative team of artisans keep this unique 'savoir-faire' alive, and realizes all the whimsical, dramatic and elaborate desires of each client. They continue to perpetuate the brand, Gripoix Paris, which has been famous for over 100 years.
